The Centre admits students on the expectation that the accepted applicant will be successful in achieving their professional goals or other objectives, and make significant personal and professional contributions to the school, their work and communities. In some exceptional circumstances the Centre does accept applicants who do not meet the minimum admission requirements. The applicants may not display the necessary aptitude or talent but are motivated, dedicated to improving themselves and driven to succeed. In such cases, the Centre requires that the applicant sign a release form that holds the institution blameless should the student fail to satisfactorily complete the program of study or find employment.
